Questions

1. What is the real situation with respect to disclosure of the files before this suit was instituted?
2. Does the respondent concede that he had no right not to be terminated?
3. If so, what possible claim can he have to reinstatement? If the respondent had quit, rather than be terminated, would not the same problem exist?
4. Does either side draw an analogy between this case and the bar examination Willner case in 373 U.S. 796?
