FIRST ANNUAL

ARTHUR HOFF LARSEN LECTURE

Honoring Illinois State University's Distinguished Professor of Education—a man who has shown unwavering devotion to the institution, acute insight into its problems, skill and perseverance in meeting them, and a constant loyalty to the faculty to which he has given steadying leadership; a man of truly extraordinary personal and academic integrity, one who has scorned the petty and small, one who has met the challenge of goodness; a man distinguished as well in public as in private life by the high quality of the things he believes important; a leader and achiever, a practical idealist; a dedicated man who has withheld no part of his energy, no part of himself for a performance of excellence.
