

Quartet trees that are displayed by larger phylogenetic trees are common inputs to phylogenomic reconstruction algorithms. We introduce the Efficient Quartet System to represent a phylogenetic tree with a subset of the quartets displayed by the tree which encode all of the topological information of the tree. We demonstrate that Efficient Quartet Systems effective inputs for quartet amalgamation algorithms when trying to reconstruct species trees and supertrees.